THE JOHN
HAWTHORN FAMILY

126-625

1638695

The honors of a name 'tis just to guard;
They are a trust but lent us, which we take,
And should, in reverence to the donor's fame,
With care transmit them down to other hands.
—Shirley.

PREFACE

The tracing of descendants of a common progenitor can be successfully and authentically accomplished only through state, county and municipal records, which in many instances have been destroyed by fire, floods or other causes. When these are not available, family Bibles and church registers must be accepted, although even this source is sometimes lacking and much information must necessarily be supplied by persons closely associated with facts and legends which have been passed on from one generation to the next.

While the name of Hawthorn is comparatively limited to a very few families in most communities, the task of assembling those having direct lineage connection with this name as descendants of John Hawthorn has been great and much credit must be given to Mrs. Elizabeth R. Pettit of East Orange, N. J., who has supplied invaluable information concerning our early American history as well as that part of the family which remained in the East. Mrs. William Hawthorn of Dayton, Ohio, was responsible for much of the data pertaining to those claiming Dayton, Ohio, and vicinity as their birth place.

While very little is known of the early life of John Hawthorn in Ireland, his entry into this country in 1792 was typical of those staunch and loyal Irishmen who cherished the traditions of old Erin to such an extent that when called upon by the British government to don the red coat, with strong prospects of fighting against their fellow countrymen, they choose the only alternative left them—that of immigrating to America. Possessing a freehold near Armagh, County Armagh, Ireland, when he received his call to service in the British army, John disposed of his holdings and with his wife and daughter set out for the land of the free.

"A History of the City of Newark, 1666 to 1613," published by The Louis Historical Publishing Co., has the following to say:

"In his own country, Mr. Hawthorn was a man of considerable substance; owned a fine freehold and other property.

"During the heroic but disastrous revolutionary outbreaks, which cost the noble young Emmet his life upon the scaffold, Hawthorn was called out by the British government. Being a Protestant and comfortably situated, it was assumed by the government that he would at once respond to the call.

"Instead of doing so he immediately disposed of his property and sailed for this country. 'I will never wear a red coat for the British government,' he said to his wife, who was equally enthusiastic in opposition to British aggression in Ireland.

"Upon coming to Newark, Mr. Hawthorn purchased a considerable tract of land on the west side of Belleville Avenue and for many years carried on a large quarrying business, presumably near the line of the present Bloomfield Avenue, residing in a house he built, where now is St. John's Cemetery and St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church.

"He was a man of very powerful physique and rather inclined to eccentricity. Once, it is stated, some athlete in Pennsylvania, having issued a challenge to wrestle any Irishman in the land, Hawthorn visited his quarry, told one of his foremen to take charge of it for a few days, and started off, merely saying he would be heard from before he was again seen in Newark, and so it proved, for the newspapers announced that he had 'tossed' the challenger and carried off the $500 stakes."

John Hawthorn's quarries were very productive of a fine grade of red sandstone which he marketed in New York, using his own ships to transport the stone. This business prospered and its owner soon became one of the influential men of Newark. His home on Belleville Road was classed as a mansion and compared favorably with those of Gouverneur mansion and Wolfert's Roost, home of Washington Irving, all of which overlooked the beautiful Passaic River.

His early education in Ireland had apparently not been neglected, for Mr. Hawthorn was a great student of Irish, Scotch and English history, and was fond of spending his leisure moments conversing or reading on these subjects. He continued to follow his early religious beliefs after coming to America, affiliating with the Presbyterian Church of Newark. When it became necessary to found the Second Presbyterian Church his devotion and generosity was manifest by the donation of sufficient stone from his quarries to construct a suitable edifice.

This geneology is not complete in that some data concerning several individuals is missing, and therefore is issued as a preliminary edition with much interesting information omitted. Those interested in this work will confer a great favor upon the editor by advising him of any errors which may occur in dates, locations, spelling of names, etc. Address R. M. Hawthorn, 2828 N. 77th Avenue, Chicago, Ill.
